Award-winning science journalist Judith Schwartz shares inspiring stories from a passionate group of eco-restorers who are following nature's lead to help revitalize some of the most degraded places on earth—and succeeding

“This vitally important book is, above all, a spring board for hope and transformation.”
—ISABELLA TREE, author of Wilding

Judith Schwartz is a leading voice in regenerative agriculture and ecological restoration, topics that have become even more relevant as the pandemic exposes flaws in our global supply chains and the importance of biodiverse ecosystems.

In her latest book, The Reindeer Chronicles, Schwartz offers an eye-opening global tour of some of the most wounded places on earth and the visionary people intent on helping them to heal. She journeys from China's Loess Plateau where a landmark project has successfully restored a blighted land region the size of Belgium, to the Norwegian tundra where an indigenous reindeer herder challenges the most powerful orthodoxies of conservation, to the Middle East where an ambitious young American attempts to reengineer the desert ecosystem using plants as his most sophisticated technology.

Through these inspiring stories and others, Schwartz demonstrates how solutions to seemingly intractable environmental problems can come from the unlikeliest of places and reveals how much is in our hands if we can find a way to work together and follow nature's lead.
